Gill. The team was small in comparison to other squads, but due to the fact that the men showed untiring efforts the squad soon shaped itself into one of the foremost of the conference. There is no doubt in the minds of the authorities on track that Michigan had the most formidable aggregation. A brief resume of the season shows that Illinois won every indoor and outdoor dual meet, defeating its old rival, Chicago. Carroll, Lang, Kriedler, Weiss, and Wilson had commendable records. Two of the men developed into track stars who were greatly feared by the conference teams on account...
