Excerpt: . . . chapter xvi analytical The Analyses Of Mixed Paint The analysis and chemical examination of a mixed paint is by no means a simple matter, and not every chemist is fitted for this work. The intellectual development of a mans reasoning power is of vast importance in all scientific work, but the science of deduction, if there be such a science, would be of the greatest importance in the training of a chemist. Woe to the chemist who starts on a false premise for he can be misled into most impossible conclusions, and if he be a man of recognized authority in other branches, his mistakes can ofttimes create a great deal of havoc. Reactions in paint chemistry are almost always irreversible, if they be organic. If a mixed paint be made of silica, calcium carbonate, and zinc oxide, it can readily be seen that...
