Herald: Good greetings, friends! Glad greetings, one and all! Haste Ye! Make ready for our noble queen, The Fair Louisiana, she who reigns O'er more than half the mighty new-found world. How tender is her sway, and yet how strong, To hold within her hands, like children s toys, The splendid regions of the northern lakes, The mystic, dreamy, soulful south-land far. See, how she comes with Springtime in her tread, Upspringing neath her feet the clover sweet, Upon her head the starry jessamine - Plucked from the whiteness of the Milky Way. Magnolias are her cheeks, and her rich lips The ripened seed of all Magnolia blooms; Wood-brown her eyes with depths as calm and clear As gentle bayous overhung by trees. France wears her as a jewel in her crown, Brave, noble France! And yet in years to come France must resign this gem, must yield this gift To that strong mother of...
