Until she was twenty-two years of age, this woman had had attacks of epilepsy, which occurred at first three or four times a week, and afterwards at longer intervals. Five years ago she had a fainting fit and fell from the second story. Six months after this accident, she noticed that her feet had increased in size, and later, her hands, face, and breast began to develop abnormally. About the same time her courses ceased. Finally, three years ago, the patient became strabismic, polyuric, and lost her strength. She now presents a classical picture of acromegalia: the hands and feet are transversely enlarged, the face has assumed an enormous, development, and the lips and tongue are voluminous. No sensory disturbances are found in the patient. All the senses are normal except that of sight. Examination of the eyes shows the existence of bitemporal hemianopsia; there is no hemiopic reaction. --S. Retinal Hemorrhages Caused by the Use of a Bicycle, by Dr. Clavelier. Archives med. de Toulouse, No. 7, April 15, 1895.) In a race of 12 kilometres a very rapid pace was taken in the last four, and one of the men, thirty-two years old, was seized with severe palpitations, which had scarcely terminated when there was a sudden diminution of vision of the left eye, falling to , while the right eye remained normal. Ophthalmoscopic examination showed traces of numerous hemorrhages. Examination of the heart was negative, and the...
