Excerpt: . . . furnishes the only adequate explanation of the remarkable change which took place in the minds and practice of the Jewish people. But how stands the question on the supposition of those who make the prophecy to be the production of a nameless author who lived and wrote in the age of Cyrus They represent him as essaying to manufacture a prophecy (!) out of what formed the common talk of the day, and thus to have set himself deliberately to write himself down as either a fool, or a forger who hoped to pass off his lucubrations as ancient writings! Unless the prophecy had been long and familiarly known to all the Jewish exiles as the work of Isaiah, and its songs, 1 sung to the accompaniment of their harps by Babels streams, as they sat down, and wept when they remembered Zion, had formed...
